Cook Medical Tokyo Office to accelerate the diversity of our employees' work styles

Tokyo- Cook Medical Japan G.K. is pleased to announce that we have relocated our Tokyo office to a new location in the building we are currently occupying to support the new, flexible workstyles. There will be no change in the address or representative phone number.

We are promoting new, flexible work styles that combines work from home and the office. Our goal is to ensure the safety of employees and prevent the spread COVID while also improving employee productivity, customer support and satisfaction, and maintaining a stable supply of products with the introduction of new work options.

The new office is intended to be a place where employees can interact with each other with greater freedom and convenience. Employees can find inspiration through casual communication or concentrate on their work in an environment that is calm and relaxing, yet supports increased productivity and synergy. In addition, we have adopted a workspace design that encourages new ideas to emerge through casual conversations and interactions, which is difficult to achieve when working from home.

We will take this opportunity to accelerate the diversity of our employees' work styles and improve productivity, thereby contributing even more to the advancement of Japan's healthcare system and to patients' well-being.
